SHOT HIS LADY-LOVE. A YOUNG RUSSIAN'S TRAGIC DEED AT A HOTEL IN VILLE D'AVRAY.

wound in his hand which eventually resulted in his death a few years ago. A handsome Russian boy of nineteen named Peter Vladimiroff while travelling together, and spent the long summer devote themselves. days wandering in the woods, while the children were left to the care of a nurse.

expensive cases and served in the most exquisite manner.

Mine, Freycinet was more enamored of her handsome boy than ever. She sang his praises to her friends, and she caressed him openly and made a great show of her devotion. Everybody was happy and bright in their society, but last night some of their friends thought Vladimires manner strange. The couple decided this morning that they would go to Ville d'Avray for a time, and accordingly they started and engaged a room in the hotel. They then went for a walk and on their return they went for a walk and on their return they ordered a sumptuous dejeuner. During the meal Vladimiroff seemed strangely are asking? excited.

Mme. Freyeinet grew alarmed and asked if he was not well. He calmed her fears and assured her he was all right, and for a time he became quiet again. Then he showed her a little revolver he had bought, and asked her if she did not think it pretty. She begged him to put it away, and eventually he gave it to ber.

When the meal was over they went to their room. Everything was per-fectly quiet there, and the servants who passed the door did not hear any noise or quarrelling. In about a quarter of an hour a pistol-shot was heard, and the servants discovered Vladimroff standing in the doorway with the revolver in his hand. He threw the pistol away, exclaiming: "I have killed my mistress! Run for a constable. Arrest

After his arrest he said : "I could not help it. A sudden impulse came over me and a voice seemed to whisper in my ear, 'Kill her, kill her.' I fought against it. Then it shouted, 'Kill her! Kill her! Kill her! Kill her now. Take the revolver from her and do it.' I couldn't help myself. I made her give me the weapen. Then I said, 'Carmine, I must kill you. Heaven gays so. Die!' I fired and she fell. My poor Carmine, my beautiful, beme and a voice seemed to whisper in my My poor Carmine, my beautiful, be-loved, is dead, and I have killed her."

On entering the room in which the deed was done Mme. Freycinet was found lying on the floor with a buliet wound in her breast. The bullet had gone through her heart, and death must have been instantaneous.

The Vendetta in New Orleans. [New York Herald.]

The people of New Orleans are passing through an experience as novel as it is tragic. The air is filled with righteous curses, and the hangman will soon have work on his hands. The stiletto of the Sicilian assassin, the blunderbuss of the professional bandit who has emigrated from the Mediterranean and brought with him the customs of a barbaric age, before courts could be relied upon to avenge crime; the vendetta of centuries back, when the relatives of a murdered man made it their business to carry out the Mosaic injunction, "A life for a life "-these are e anomalies which render the situation

The story is worth telling. There is a large colony of Italians in New Orleans. Among the number are many well-to-do, honorable citizens, men of culture and refinement, who deeply feel the disgrace which has been brought upon the city, and are anxious to have the guilty brought to justice. But the bulk of this foreign element is composed of the riff raff of creation-rogues without con-science, who sell fruit at the street cor-ners in the day time and at night attend secret meeting where assassination is the subject of debate. Their leaders ignore our language, have nothing in common with us, left their native land in haste because the police were at their heels, and now, having escaped the vengeance of the home authorities, are pursuing their trade of murder here.

During the last few years Italians have been found in the streets of New Orleans either riddled by bullets or bleeding to death from the gashes of a knife. These crimes never received the punishment due, because even the rela-On the witness-stand their memories entirely failed them and justice was balked. Detectives followed trail after trail, but the mystery was never uncovered. All this blood was the result of a feud in which the murder of one person was followed by the sudden taking off of the man who committed the deed, and so on until the series of crimes excited public.

The trial is to come off in a few days, and the case of these rogues looked desperate. Undaunted by fear of the law, however, their partners in crime met in secret conclave, appointed half a dozen swashing.Machines, of their number to murder Hennessey,

On the night of October 15th, last Wednesday, Hennessey returned home late. As he was opening the door of his house the report of a voiley of muskerry filled the air. From a safe covert the villains shot the officer. With half a dozen bullets in his body, the brave man thereof the fire with a revolver, then

So long as these Italians confined their crimes to the murder of their own native rivals in the general feud, the authorities were comparatively helpless. But now that they have made war on the city and declared their intention to kill any one who seeks for criminal evidence against them, the people, thoroughly roused, are forming themselves into vigilance committees and swear that they will not rest until the leaders of this gang will not rest until the leaders of this gang

MAX MEADOWS is situated seventy-two miles west of Rosnoke, twenty-eight miles west of Radford, and seventy-nine miles east of Bristol, which is on

2.015 FEET ABOVE TIDEWATER, REED CREEK flows through the town and furnishes an excellent water supply for town, manufacturing, and drainage purposes. The location is a beautiful one, and on account of the great elevation, good water supply, and easy, natural drainage the town is a very desirable and healthy location for resistence and manufacturing purposes. MAX MEADOWS lies in the heart of the great from Ore Section of Southwestern Virginia, being surrounded on all sides by Iron-dines and properties. Two very large Iron-Ore properties are only three and a half miles from the town, and will be the principal source of supply for the Blast-Furnace now under construction. The town is only forty miles in an air line from the great Pocahontas Flat Top Coal Fields. The present distance by rail is one hundred and three miles, and it is more than probable that at some day in the future a shorter and more direct line will be built, making MAX MEADOWS a Junctional Point and giving it the cheapest possible supplies of Coal, Coke, and Iron-Ore. This is the centre of an agricultural district noted for years on account of its richness and fertility, and is one of the largest suppring points for fine cattle in Southwestern Virginia.

The management of the MAX MEADOWS LAND AND IMPROVEMENT COMPANY has been conservative throughout, and it has been the purpose of the Company to make its lots valuable before offering them to the public. For this reason a large amount of money has been expended in improving the town. Streets have been opened and graded, a handsome, first-class hotel is nearly completed, a large brick hotel and store-building is under construction, water-works are being built, and a large number of houses have been completed and are in course of erection. The Norfolk and Western Railroad Company proposes to erect a handsome stone Passenger-station on ground reserved for that purpose, and will commence work during the coming year.

In the principal business part of the town a restriction is put upon the lots, that no buildings can be constructe
